

To Whom it May Concern:

I have been notified of the challenge that the CBA is bringing before the FCC. As a patron of Wells Fargo, and as a registered participant in the Indiana Telephone Privacy Program, I am disgusted by this possible weakening of the law. Those of us on the do not call list are there for a reason, and do not want to be bothered, whether by people we currently do business with or by new businesses. Allowing this change in the law could open the floodgates. I am extremely happy to be able to sit down to dinner with my family and not have the phone interrupt, to have company over and not have the phone ring, to have people sleeping and not have the phone wake them up. I implore you to keep these and other things in mind when this proposed change is in front of you. I will be in contact with my bank personally, as well. With all the other forms of advertising available, I don't need businesses, of any kind, calling me on my personal phone line.

Thank you,

Rachael Caldwell
